

Create an Activity List

College applications are meant to compile information about youth from both inside and outside of the classroom. One way they get to know prospective students is by asking them to list the activities they have consistently participated in since 9th grade. These activities should include anything they participated in more than once. If youth volunteered at a soup kitchen one day that would not be included, but if they volunteered weekly for a few months then that should be included. Youth should include their participation in C2L-PHL because it demonstrates practical application of skills in real-world settings and showcases youth readiness for higher education.
